Defendants' Response to Plaintiff's Request for Production of Documents

Pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 34, defendants hereby respond to the plaintiff's request for production of documents.

At the beginning of his request for production, plaintiff has asked for certain items that are not enumerated. First, plaintiff requests "[a]ny and all kinds or types of writings to include but not limited to documents, attachments, e-mail correspondence, tapes, transcripts and records related to the administrative inquiry ordered by Evanko, including, but not limited to" certain specified documents. To the extent the requested items exist and are within the defendants' possession, custody or control, they do not object to producing them. However, plaintiff's request for production does not specify a reasonable time, place, and manner of making the inspection or performing related acts as required by Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b). Consequently, defendants reserve the right to object to the time, place and manner of making the inspection until such time as plaintiff has made the required specification.

Second, plaintiff has requested "[a]ny kind or type of attachments, e-mail correspondence, tapes, transcripts and records related to the supervisory inquiry ordered by Coury, included but not limited to" a list of specified items. To the best of defendants' knowledge, information, and belief, Lieutenant Colonel Coury did not order any supervisory inquiry relevant to this lawsuit. Lieutenant Colonel Coury did receive a complaint about plaintiff's activities. In accordance with departmental regulations, Lieutenant Colonel Coury documented that complaint and forwarded it to the Pennsylvania State Police Bureau of Professional Responsibility, where it was assigned Supervisory Inquiry IAD# 1999-409. If this is the supervisory inquiry referenced by plaintiff, defendants do not object to producing the requested documentation to the extent that it exists and is within their possession, custody, or control. However, plaintiff's request for production does not specify a reasonable time, place, and manner of making the inspection or performing related acts as required by Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b). Consequently, defendants reserve the right to object to the time, place and manner of making the inspection until such time as plaintiff has made the required specification.

Third, plaintiff has asked for "[a]ll kind or type of documents, e-mail correspondence, memos, notes, etc., and records related to Evanko's August 24, 1999 memorandum to Mr. Marc Infantino removing Captain Ober from the Book Committee." To the extent the requested items exist and are within the defendants' possession, custody or control, they do not object to producing them. However, plaintiff's request for production does not specify a reasonable time, place, and manner of making the inspection or performing related acts as required by Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b). Consequently, defendants reserve the right to object to the time, place and manner of making the inspection until such time as plaintiff has made the required specification.

Next, the plaintiff has made various requests that are set forth in enumerated paragraphs. Defendants respond to those enumerated paragraphs as follows:

1. Defendants object to the request set forth in this paragraph because it is overbroad and not reasonably calculated to lead to discovery of admissible evidence.
2. Plaintiff has requested the following: "Relevant portions of the National Governors Association Task Force plan related to Captain [David F.] Young and his official duties. Relevant portions of the Republican National Convention Task Force plan related to Captain Young and his official duties. All documents, e-mail correspondence and records related to Captain Young's assignments related to planning responsibilities for the National Governors Association Conference." To the extent the requested items exist and are within the defendants' possession, custody or control, they do not object to producing them. However, plaintiff's request for production does not specify a reasonable time, place, and manner of making the inspection or performing related acts. Consequently, defendants reserve the right to object to the time, place and manner of making the inspection until such time as plaintiff has made the required specification. Defendants object to the remainder of the requests set forth in this paragraph because they are not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence.

3. To the extent the requested items exist and are within the defendants' possession, custody or control, they do not object to producing them. However, plaintiff's request for production does not specify a reasonable time, place, and manner of making the inspection or performing related acts. Consequently, defendants reserve the right to object to the time, place and manner of making the inspection until such time as plaintiff has made the required specification.

4. To the extent the requested items exist and are within the defendants' possession, custody or control, they do not object to producing them. However, plaintiff's request for production does not specify a reasonable time, place, and manner of making the inspection or performing related acts as required by Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b). Consequently, defendants reserve the right to object to the time, place and manner of making the inspection until such time as plaintiff has made the required specification.

5. Plaintiff has requested "[a]ll documents, e-mail correspondence and records from Major Lyle Szupika [sic] and any other command staff related to the planning of assignments related to the National Governors Association Conference." Defendants do not understand plaintiff's request and need him to clarify what he means by "other command staff related to the planning of assignments...."

6. To the extent the requested items exist and are within the defendants' possession, custody or control, they do not object to producing them. However, plaintiff's request for production does not specify a reasonable time, place, and manner of making the inspection or performing related acts as required by Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b). Consequently, defendants reserve the right to object to the time, place and manner of making the inspection until such time as plaintiff has made the required specification.

7. Plaintiff's paragraph 7 does not set forth any request for production.

8. Defendants do not object to producing a copy of AR 4-25. However, plaintiff's request for production does not specify a reasonable time, place, and manner of making the inspection or performing related acts as required by Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b). Consequently, defendants reserve the right to object to the time, place and manner of making the inspection until such time as plaintiff has made the required specification.

9. Defendants do not object to producing a copy of AR 1-6. However, plaintiff's request for production does not specify a reasonable time, place, and manner of making the inspection or performing related acts as required by Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b). Consequently, defendants reserve the right to object to the time, place and manner of making the inspection until such time as plaintiff has made the required specification.

10. Defendants do not object to producing a copy of FR 1-1. However, plaintiff's request for production does not specify a reasonable time, place, and manner of making the inspection or performing related acts as required by Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b). Consequently, defendants reserve the right to object to the time, place and manner of making the inspection until such time as plaintiff has made the required specification.

11. Defendants do not object to producing a copy of FR 1-2. However, plaintiff's request for production does not specify a reasonable time, place, and manner of making the inspection or performing related acts as required by Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b). Consequently, defendants reserve the right to object to the time, place and manner of making the inspection until such time as plaintiff has made the required specification.

12. Defendants do not object to producing a copy of FR 3-2. However, plaintiff's request for production does not specify a reasonable time, place, and manner of making the inspection or performing related acts as required by Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b). Consequently, defendants reserve the right to object to the time, place and manner of making the inspection until such time as plaintiff has made the required specification.

13. Defendants do not object to producing a copy of FR 3-3. However, plaintiff's request for production does not specify a reasonable time, place, and manner of making the inspection or performing related acts as required by Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b). Consequently, defendants reserve the right to object to the time, place and manner of making the inspection until such time as plaintiff has made the required specification.

14. Defendants object to the request set forth in this paragraph because it is overbroad, not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence, and calls for confidential and privileged information.

15. Defendants do not object to producing a copy of AR 1-10. However, plaintiff's request for production does not specify a reasonable time, place, and manner of making the inspection or performing related acts as required by Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b). Consequently, defendants reserve the right to object to the time, place and manner of making the inspection until such time as plaintiff has made the required specification.

16. Defendants do not understand the request set forth in this paragraph and need plaintiff to clarify what he is seeking before they can respond.

17. Defendants do not object to producing a copy of OM 7-9. However, plaintiff's request for production does not specify a reasonable time, place, and manner of making the inspection or performing related acts as required by Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b). Consequently, defendants reserve the right to object to the time, place and manner of making the inspection until such time as plaintiff has made the required specification.

18. Plaintiff has asked for a copy of "The Uniform Guidelines on Employee Selection Procedures referenced in OM 7-9." The requested document is a federal publication that the plaintiff can obtain from the internet at www.usdoj.gov/crt/emp/uniformguidelines.html.

19. To the extent the requested items exist and are within the defendants' possession, custody or control, they do not object to producing them. However, plaintiff's request for production does not specify a reasonable time, place, and manner of making the inspection or performing related acts as required by Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b). Consequently, defendants reserve the right to object to the time, place and manner of making the inspection until such time as plaintiff has made the required specification.

20. Plaintiff has requested "[a]ll documents, records, findings, and appeals related to the Special Appeal Board hearing that was conducted in March 2000 related to Grievance HQ-164." Defendants are not in possession, custody or control of the official records related to the referenced grievance, but they are willing to produce whatever documents they may have. However, plaintiff's request for production does not specify a reasonable time, place, and manner of making the inspection or performing related acts as required by Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b). Consequently, defendants reserve the right to object to the time, place and manner of making the inspection until such time as plaintiff has made the required specification.

21. To the extent the requested items exist and are within the defendants' possession, custody or control, they do not object to producing them. However, plaintiff's request for production does not specify a reasonable time, place, and manner of making the inspection or performing related acts as required by Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b). Consequently, defendants reserve the right to object to the time, place and manner of making the inspection until such time as plaintiff has made the required specification.

22. To the extent the requested items exist and are within the defendants' possession, custody or control, they do not object to producing them. However, plaintiff's request for production does not specify a reasonable time, place, and manner of making the inspection or performing related acts as required by Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b). Consequently, defendants reserve the right to object to the time, place and manner of making the inspection until such time as plaintiff has made the required specification.

23. To the extent the requested items exist and are within the defendants' possession, custody or control, they do not object to producing them. However, plaintiff's request for production does not specify a reasonable time, place, and manner of making the inspection or performing related acts as required by Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b). Consequently, defendants reserve the right to object to the time, place and manner of making the inspection until such time as plaintiff has made the required specification.

24. To the extent the requested items exist and are within the defendants' possession, custody or control, they do not object to producing them. However, plaintiff's request for production does not specify a reasonable time, place, and manner of making the inspection or performing related acts as required by Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b). Consequently, defendants reserve the right to object to the time, place and manner of making the inspection until such time as plaintiff has made the required specification.

25. To the extent the requested items exist and are within the defendants' possession, custody or control, they do not object to producing them. However, plaintiff's request for production does not specify a reasonable time, place, and manner of making the inspection or performing related acts as required by Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b). Consequently, defendants reserve the right to object to the time, place and manner of making the inspection until such time as plaintiff has made the required specification.

26. To the extent the requested items exist and are within the defendants' possession, custody or control, they do not object to producing them. However, plaintiff's request for production does not specify a reasonable time, place, and manner of making the inspection or performing related acts as required by Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b). Consequently, defendants reserve the right to object to the time, place and manner of making the inspection until such time as plaintiff has made the required specification.

27. To the extent the requested items exist and are within the defendants' possession, custody or control, they do not object to producing them. However, plaintiff's request for production does not specify a reasonable time, place, and manner of making the inspection or performing related acts as required by Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b). Consequently, defendants reserve the right to object to the time, place and manner of making the inspection until such time as plaintiff has made the required specification.

28. To the extent the requested items exist and are within the defendants' possession, custody or control, they do not object to producing them. However, plaintiff's request for production does not specify a reasonable time, place, and manner of making the inspection or performing related acts as required by Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b). Consequently, defendants reserve the right to object to the time, place and manner of making the inspection until such time as plaintiff has made the required specification.

29. Defendants do not object to producing that portion of the historic file that relates to AR 1-1.02(c), but do object to producing the remainder of the file because plaintiff's request is not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence. Additionally, plaintiff's request for production does not specify a reasonable time, place, and manner of making the inspection or performing related acts as required by Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b). Consequently, defendants reserve the right to object to the time, place and manner of making the inspection until such time as plaintiff has made the required specification.

30. To the extent the requested items exist and are within the defendants' possession, custody or control, they do not object to producing them. However, plaintiff's request for production does not specify a reasonable time, place, and manner of making the inspection or performing related acts as required by Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b). Consequently, defendants reserve the right to object to the time, place and manner of making the inspection until such time as plaintiff has made the required specification.

32. Defendants object to providing plaintiff with the scores of all Captains who took the 1998 test for promotion to Major. The scores are confidential and have never been provided to any of the defendants. The Commissioner was only provided with an alphabetical list of individuals who were eligible for promotion. Consequently, plaintiff's request for the individual test scores is not designed to lead to the discovery of relevant, admissible evidence. Defendants are willing to provide the promotion eligibility list of all Captains who took the 1998 test for promotion to Major. However, plaintiff's request for production does not specify a reasonable time, place, and manner of making the inspection or performing related acts as required by Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b). Consequently, defendants reserve the right to object to the time, place and manner of making the inspection until such time as plaintiff has made the required specification.

35. Plaintiff's request for production does not contain a paragraph 35.

36. Plaintiff has requested "[a]ny written SOP's which govern the flow of work and work review in Commissioner Evanko's office." Defendants do not know what plaintiff is referring to in this paragraph and are, therefore, unable to formulate a response.

37. Defendants do not understand the request set forth in this paragraph and need plaintiff to clarify what he is seeking before they can respond.

38. Defendants object to this request as overbroad.
